INTRODUCTION

1. The Assembly was concerned with the following items of the Consolidated Agenda (documents AB/XXIII/1 Rev.2 and AB/XXIII/6, paragraphs 16 and 17): 1, 2, 9, 9bis. 13 and 14.

2. The report on the said items, with the exception of item 9, is contained in the General Report (document AB/XXIII/6).

3. The report on item 9 is contained in this document.
ITEM 9 OF THE CONSOLIDATED AGENDA:

MATTERS CONCERNING THE PCT UNION

Accession of China to the PCT

4. The Chairman noted that discussion would be based on the proposals by the International Bureau contained in document PCT/A/XX/1, taking into account the recommendation to the Assembly, contained in paragraph 13 of document PCT/CTC/XIII/3, which the PCT Committee for Technical Cooperation had made pursuant to Articles 16(3)(e) and 32(3) of the PCT.

5. In response to an invitation by the Chairman and in accordance with Articles 16(3)(e) and 32(3) of the PCT, the Delegation of China made a statement to the Assembly. It first expressed its gratitude for the consideration being given to questions associated with China’s accession to the PCT and for the welcome, support and assistance it had received from other countries and from organizations. It emphasized the importance of the PCT generally and in particular to China, which had decided to accede to the PCT as soon as possible on the understanding that Chinese would be made a filing and publication language under the PCT and that the Chinese Patent Office would be appointed as an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority. The Delegation then enumerated the facts that qualified the Chinese Patent Office for becoming an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority.

6. The Delegation recalled some of the achievements made since the establishment of the Chinese Patent Office (CPO) in 1980, including in particular:

   (a) The CPO, located in a new, modern and large building, has a computerized management system and nearly 1,400 staff.

   (b) The Chinese Patent Law and Regulations of April 1, 1985, have been revised with effect on January 1, 1993; the revised law provides patent protection for pharmaceutical products and chemical substances, extends the patent term from 15 years to 20 years from the filing date, and makes other important improvements.

   (c) A nation-wide system of bodies dealing with patent matters has been established. They include 54 Local Administrative Authorities for Patent Affairs, 474 Patent Agencies with 5,000 registered patent agents, the All China’s Inventors’ Association, several Intellectual Property Societies, the Patent Documentation Service Network and several Intellectual Property Institutes.

   (d) During the period from April 1, 1985, to August 31, 1992, a total of 258,848 patent applications (including 74,295 for inventions, 45.5% of which were from 69 foreign countries and regions) were filed with the CPO which granted, during the said period, a total of 105,784 patent rights (including 14,283 for inventions, 61.6% of which were from foreign countries and regions).

   (e) China is a party to the WIPO Convention and to the Paris Convention.
7. In relation to patent examination, the Chinese Patent Office had established a strong examining force with five examination departments and one re-examination board. The first examination department was in charge of various administrative functions and would, in the future, undertake the function of a PCT receiving Office. The other examination departments were in charge of substantive examination of patent applications in the mechanical, electrical, chemical and physical fields, respectively. Substantive examination included a search of the prior art and examination for novelty, inventiveness and industrial applicability. The re-examination board was in charge of re-examination and invalidation cases.

8. The Chinese Patent Office had nearly 350 examiners, all of whom had a university degree and a good knowledge of at least one foreign language. Of the examiners, one third were senior examiners, half had received training abroad, and two-thirds had more than five years experience as examiners. Examiners were trained intensively in various patent law and examination subjects by Chinese and foreign experts, and underwent probation of one to two years under a senior examiner’s supervision.

9. Between April 1, 1985, and June 30, 1992, the Chinese Patent Office had searched, examined and issued first official actions in relation to 31,908 applications (accounting for 76.8% of the total number of requests for examination), and 28,987 applications had been finally disposed of by way of grant, rejection or withdrawal (61.9% of the total number of requests for examination). A special quality control would ensure the quality of search and examination.

10. In relation to patent documentation, the Chinese Patent Office had established a collection including more than 30 million patent documents from more than 20 countries, dating back to 1890. The collection also included a complete set of the periodicals contained in the non-patent literature provided for in the PCT minimum documentation. The search files were arranged according to the International Patent Classification (IPC). Means of access by examiners included search files, microfiche, CD-ROM and computer, details of which were outlined by the Delegation.

11. The Delegation pointed out that, of the PCT minimum documentation, only those documents listed in Annex III to document PCT/A/XX/I were not presently held by the Chinese Patent Office. However, arrangements had already been made for the documents covered by items 2, 3, 5 and 6 of that list to be obtained. The Delegation expressed its gratitude, in particular, to the Patent Offices of Austria, France, Germany, Switzerland and the United Kingdom, to the EPO and to WIPO and the Director General, for their generous assistance in this regard. The Delegation expected that the remaining documents covered by the list would be obtained by the Chinese Patent Office before its planned accession to the PCT in 1993.

12. The Delegation concluded its statement by pointing out that the Chinese Patent Office had, through a program of development over a number of years, built up a strong examining force, supported by a rich collection of documentation. The Office thus had the capability of carrying out the functions of an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority. The Delegation expressed its confidence that the Chinese Patent Office would be able to fulfill the duties of an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority under the PCT, and expressed its hope that the Assembly would approve the Office’s appointment as such an Authority with a view to China’s accession to the PCT as soon as possible.
13. The Delegations of Germany, France, Bulgaria, Austria, the Republic of Korea, Japan, Australia, Hungary, the Russian Federation, Sweden, Switzerland, the United States of America, Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Canada, the United Kingdom, Denmark, Spain, Finland, Mongolia, Norway and Portugal and the Representative of the European Patent Organisation, as well as the Delegations of Egypt and Kenya and the Representative of FICPI expressed their strong support for the appointment of the Chinese Patent Office as International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority, noting that China had succeeded in a remarkably short time in establishing a viable and efficient patent system on the basis of a modern patent law of international standard. Many delegations congratulated the Chinese Patent Office for its impressive accomplishments and noted that the accession of China to the PCT would represent a major step towards improving relations between China and the present PCT member States.

14. As recommended by the Committee for Technical Cooperation of the PCT Union and set out in paragraph 13 of document PCT/CTC/XIII/3, the Assembly unanimously:

(i) adopted the amendments to PCT Rules 10.1(f), 11.9(b) and (e) and 48.3(a) and (b), as set out in Annex II to this report, with effect on the date on which China becomes bound by the PCT;

(ii) approved the text of the Agreement between the Chinese Patent Office and WIPO, as set out in Annex I to this report;

(iii) appointed the Chinese Patent Office as International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority with effect on the date on which China becomes bound by the PCT.

Cut-Off Date of Minimum Documentation

15. The Delegation of Australia raised the question of whether the 1920 cut-off date for minimum documentation provided in PCT Rule 34 was, at the present time, still a reasonable date. It believed that one should examine whether it was necessary to include, in the PCT minimum documentation, documents older than 50 years. The Delegation of Australia proposed that the competent bodies under the PCT should study the matter.

16. The Delegations of Sweden, Belgium, the United Kingdom and Germany, and the Representative of the European Patent Organisation, supported the proposal made by the Delegation of Australia.

17. The Representative of FICPI, while agreeing that the matter should be studied with an open mind, was concerned about the possible effects a change might have on the reliability of the international search report, and stated that his Federation would also be studying the question.
18. The Assembly decided that the desirability of revising PCT Rule 34 would be studied and that such a study should start with the consideration of the question in the December 1992 session of the PCT Committee for Technical Cooperation.

International Search and International Preliminary Examination of International Applications filed in Spanish

19. Discussions were based on document PCT/A/XX/2 Rev.

20. The Delegation of Spain expressed concern of a general nature with the proposed amendments as they stood, and stated that the time available for studying the proposed amendments had been insufficient. It noted that earlier changes to PCT Rule 12.1, which provided for international search on the basis of translations of international applications filed in Spanish, had been introduced as an interim measure to enable Spain’s accession to the PCT. However, those changes did not, in the Delegation’s view, justify the making of amendments to similar effect in relation to international preliminary examination. The amendments proposed would worsen the situation for Spanish-speaking applicants by widening the range of circumstances in which they would be required to prepare costly translations of international applications during the international phase.

21. The Delegation noted that the Assembly had, when Spain’s impending accession to the PCT was discussed in 1986, unanimously declared its willingness to appoint the Spanish Patent Office as an International Searching Authority once all the conditions prescribed by the PCT and the Regulations thereunder were fulfilled (document PCT/A/XIV/3, paragraph 9). The Spanish Patent Office had, since its accession to the PCT in 1989, made great efforts towards preparing itself to be an International Searching Authority. These efforts had included the assembling, with the valued assistance of the industrial property offices of France, Germany, Switzerland, the United States of America and other countries, of the minimum documentation under the PCT in its documents. In addition, the Spanish Office had promoted the creation of a patent documentation center in the Spanish language, whose objective was to collect all patent documents in that language. That Center had received much support from other Spanish-speaking countries. The Spanish Patent Office had commenced the preparation of state-of-the-art searches in 1991, and hoped to actively pursue appointment as an International Searching Authority in 1993.

22. The Delegation also indicated that the Spanish Patent Office would, in the event that Spain were to withdraw its reservation on Chapter II of the PCT, also hope to seek appointment as an International Preliminary Examining Authority.

23. The Delegation noted that Spain’s membership of the European Patent Organisation did not preclude the appointment of the Spanish Patent Office as an International Searching Authority and as an International Preliminary Examining Authority. The Administrative Council of the European Patent Organisation had agreed that the criteria of Section III, paragraph 1, of the Protocol on Centralisation of the European Patent System were fulfilled, with the effect that the Spanish Patent Office should in due course be authorized by the Administrative Council to act as an International Searching Authority and as an International Preliminary Examining Authority under the PCT in respect of international applications filed in Spanish (see Official Journal EPO, No. 2/1986, page 49).
24. The Delegation of Spain noted with gratitude, in connection with the provisions of PCT Rule 12.1(c) and (d), that the European Patent Office had, in practice, for a limited number of international applications filed in Spanish with the Spanish Patent Office as receiving Office, waived the requirement that applicants must provide the translation required under that Rule. The Delegation observed that the European Patent Office employed more than 100 examiners with a capacity in the Spanish language, and believed that there would be benefit in exploring the possibility that the European Patent Office might afford a similar exemption to nationals and residents of other Spanish-speaking countries which might accede to the PCT.

25. The Delegation of Spain believed, in view of these various possibilities for future action which had not yet been pursued, that it would be premature to accept the proposed amendments at present.

26. The Director General emphasized that there was not yet any International Searching Authority or International Preliminary Examining Authority which had declared itself prepared to carry out international searches or international preliminary examination in respect of international applications filed in Spanish without the need for a translation. The European Patent Office had not so declared itself, and the Spanish Patent Office had not yet sought appointment as an International Searching Authority or International Preliminary Examining Authority. While the Regulations presently provided the possibility for international searches on international applications in Spanish on the basis of a translation, not even that possibility existed for international preliminary examination of international applications in Spanish. Several Latin American countries were interested in the PCT. Participation of Spain in Chapter II of the PCT was highly desirable. For all these reasons, a solution to the Spanish language question was urgent. Naturally, as soon as there will be an International Searching Authority and an International Preliminary Examining Authority which can work in Spanish, the need for translation would disappear.

27. The Delegation of Chile, speaking as an observer, indicated that Chile had, as a Spanish-speaking country, cooperated with the Spanish Patent Office in its efforts to develop the Documentation Center with Spanish language documents. As far as international search and preliminary examination were concerned, the Delegation noted that the International Bureau had proposed a solution to a problem with which Spanish-speaking countries were faced. The Delegation looked forward to the time when Spanish would be fully used as a working language under the PCT.

28. The Representative of the European Patent Organisation confirmed that, having regard to the Protocol on the Centralisation of the European Patent System, the Spanish Patent Office would be entitled to act as an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority for applicants from Spain and from other Spanish-speaking countries. Currently, the European Patent Office, in practice, conducted international searches on international applications filed in Spanish with the Spanish Patent Office as receiving Office without requiring a translation as provided by PCT Rule 12.1(c). That was made on the basis of an informal arrangement with Spain, in view of the fact that Spain was a Contracting State of the European Patent Convention. The Representative was not, at that stage, in a position to offer an extension of that arrangement to international applications filed in Spanish in States other than Spain.

29. The Director General noted that the informal arrangement between the European Patent Organisation and Spain was not applicable to Latin-American Spanish-speaking countries and in any case did not deal with international preliminary examination. He once again pointed out that the amendments proposed by the International Bureau were intended to apply to international applications filed in Spanish only until such time as they were able to be subjected to international search and international preliminary examination by an International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority without the need for a translation, and suggested that this circumstance should be expressed by the Assembly in adopting the proposed Rules.

30. The Delegation of Spain indicated that its concerns would be largely met by the Director General’s suggestion and that, if that suggestion was adopted, it could agree to the proposed amendments.

31. The Delegate of France, noting that he was also Chairman of the Administrative Council of the European Patent Organisation, indicated that the carrying out of international searches by the European Patent Office on international applications filed in Spanish could be considered further, but he would not wish any assumption to be made as to such a possible decision.

32. The Delegation of Germany pointed out that, although the discussion had so far been restricted to international applications filed in the Spanish language, the proposed amendments were not limited to such applications. The Chairman observed that the document under consideration made this clear, although its title mentioned only international applications filed in Spanish.

33. The Delegation of Portugal stated that the Rules concerned should apply in all cases where an international application was filed in a language for which there was no competent International Preliminary Examining Authority prepared to undertake the international preliminary examination without the need for a translation.

34. The Assembly agreed with a suggestion by the Delegation of the United Kingdom that the word “However,” be inserted at the beginning of the second sentence of PCT Rule 92.2(a) as proposed to be amended.

35. The Assembly noted the position of the Delegation of Spain and unanimously adopted the amendments to the Regulations under the PCT as set out in Annex II to this report, and decided that those amendments would enter into force on January 1, 1993. The Assembly agreed that the adopted amendments would cease to be applicable with respect to international applications filed in Spanish as soon as a competent International Searching and Preliminary Examining Authority was available to carry out, without the need for a translation, international searches and international preliminary examinations in respect of international applications filed in Spanish.

Amendment to Rule 91.1 of the Regulations under the PCT (obvious errors in documents)

36. Discussions were based on document PCT/A/XX/3, a proposal by the United Kingdom.

37. The Delegation of the United Kingdom introduced its proposal, noting that earlier proposals to amend Rule 91.1 had been considered by the PCT Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters and by the Assembly at its eighteenth session. The Delegation emphasized that the problems dealt with by its proposal were amongst the most serious of those encountered by applicants using PCT procedures and were urgently in need of resolution.

38. The Delegation of France seconded, and the International Bureau indicated its full agreement with, the United Kingdom’s proposal.

39. The Delegation of the United States of America expressed its sympathy with the objectives of the proposal, noting that it was designed to make the PCT more user-friendly and to afford more flexibility in enabling applicants to rectify errors which might adversely affect their rights. However, the Delegation raised the question of compatibility of the proposal with Article 11 of the PCT, and pointed out that it would be undesirable if an international application rectified under the Rule was liable to challenge because of lack of such compatibility. This was important in the interests of both applicants and third parties.
The Delegation therefore proposed that consideration of the proposal be deferred, and that the International Bureau be invited to prepare a document studying the relationship between Article 11 and the proposal and to convene a meeting of the PCT Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters to consider the legal implications in greater detail.

40. The Delegation of Japan also expressed sympathy for the objectives of the proposal, but was not in a position to support the proposal as presented. It believed that the proposal could allow rectifications which broaden the disclosure in an international application so as to include new matter not present in the international application as originally filed. In its view, the contents of the priority document were not relevant for the purposes of determining the scope of the original disclosure in the international application itself. The Delegation expressed particular concern that the interests of third parties might be adversely affected.

41. Moreover, the Delegation of Japan noted that the question of correction of applications was due for discussion in July 1993 in the context of the proposed Patent Law Treaty, and was of the opinion that it would therefore be premature for the Assembly to make a decision on the United Kingdom’s proposal at this stage. However, the Delegation indicated that it would not oppose further consideration of the question by the PCT Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters.

42. The Delegation of Sweden, with which the Delegations of Finland, Canada, Norway, Australia, Austria and Germany agreed, stated that it was in favor of the proposal but would not object to further study of the question by the PCT’ Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters.

43. The Delegation of the United Kingdom expressed its appreciation for this support and indicated its agreement to such further study. It suggested that the Committee be convened at an early opportunity to enable work to proceed rapidly, with a view to resolving the concerns expressed and to putting the matter to the Assembly for decision at its next meeting.

44. The Representative of the European Patent Organisation welcomed the proposal as a step in the right direction. The interests of both applicants and third parties should be taken into account. The Representative supported the suggestion that the question be further considered by the PCT Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters. The Representative also noted that Rule 88 of the Implementing Regulations to the European Patent Convention bore a strong similarity to PCT Rule 91.1, and felt it advisable that the two Rules and the relevant practice in relation to them be as uniform as possible. The European Patent Office was awaiting a pending decision of the Enlarged Board of Appeal which was expected to deal with various aspects of rectification of errors. The Representative believed that the decision would be helpful for further consideration of the United Kingdom’s proposal, and indicated that he would, after making enquiries, advise the International Bureau of when the decision could be expected.

45. The Director General stated that the fact that the proposed Patent Law Treaty contained provisions on amendments and corrections of patent applications should not prevent the early consideration of the United Kingdom’s proposal.

46. The Delegations of Sweden and France supported the Director General’s statement.

47. The Assembly decided not to consider the United Kingdom’s proposal further at its present session and invited the International Bureau to convene an early meeting of the PCT Committee for Administrative and Legal Matters for a detailed study of the proposal.

Amendments to the Regulations Under the PCT in Connection With Certain Newly Independent States

48. Discussions were based on document PCT/A/XX/4.

49. In introducing its proposal, the International Bureau noted that the system contained in the proposal had been specially created in response to a situation not envisaged in the PCT itself.

50. The Delegation of the Russian Federation expressed agreement with the proposal, noting that it appeared to meet fully the previously unforeseen situation which had arisen with the cessation of the existence of the Soviet Union.

51. The Delegation of Ukraine, in supporting the proposal, observed that a time gap between the cessation of the existence of the Soviet Union and the deposit of a declaration of continuation was inevitable. The Delegation stated that Ukraine was ready to fulfil its obligations under the proposed new Rules.

52. The Delegation of France, while agreeing that provisions were needed to deal with the situation which had arisen, expressed its concern as to the legal basis for the proposal. First, the Delegation was not of the opinion that it would be by a declaration of continuation that successor States would become member States, since, in the Delegation’s view, the fact that a State was a successor State made that State a Contracting State. Second, the Delegation was of the opinion that the Soviet Union had not ceased to exist; it continued to exist as the Russian Federation. The Delegation proposed certain modifications of the wording of the proposed Rules designed to overcome these legal problems.

53. The Delegation of Japan stated that it agreed with the intention behind the proposal of the International Bureau. However, the Delegation expressed concern as to the general legal basis of the proposed system. It was not clear whether Article 58(1) of the PCT enabled the Assembly to make Regulations governing declarations of continuation; rather, the Assembly should deal with such cases by way of making decisions. The Delegation observed that a declaration could be deposited by a successor State which in fact was not diplomatically recognized by one or more of the existing Contracting States. A declaration deposited under proposed PCT Rule 32.1 could, in the Delegation’s view, only be effective if the existing PCT Contracting States recognized the successor State.

54. The Director General pointed out that the making of Regulations is, in itself, a decision of the Assembly. In any event, Article 58(1)(ii) and (iii) of the PCT provided, in itself, a sufficient legal basis for the proposed new Rules. The application of the PCT or of any of the international treaties administered by WIPO to a State could not be denied by another State on the ground there were no diplomatic relations between the two States since the mutual obligations provided for in a multilateral treaty flowed from that treaty, and that treaty alone; consequently the lack of diplomatic recognition was irrelevant. The Director General also noted that direct benefits under the proposed new Rules would be enjoyed, in particular, by applicants from Contracting States other than the successor State because such applicants could, under the proposed new Rules, extend their rights to the successor State having deposited a declaration of continuation.

55. The Delegation of Germany pointed out that benefits would also accrue to the successor States concerned, particularly in relation to the importation of technology associated with the granting of patents to nationals and residents of other Contracting States. As to the legal basis of the proposed new Rules, the Delegation’s view was that the Assembly was clearly competent to act; the mode by which a decision was expressed (by making Regulations or otherwise) was not relevant.

56. Noting the concerns expressed by the Delegation of France, the International Bureau modified its proposal in relation to proposed new PCT Rule 32.1(d) by omitting the words “as a successor State.”

57. In response to a query by the Delegation of Germany, the International Bureau advised that the extension fee required under proposed PCT Rule 32.1(c)(ii) would be payable in every case, even if the maximum fee for ten designations had already been paid. Although the extension fee was of the same amount as the designation fee, it was a different fee which was not subject to the maximum amount payable for designation fees. The extension fee was intended to cover the costs incurred by the International Bureau in its operations under the proposed Rules.

58. The Delegations of Switzerland, the United Kingdom, Australia, the Netherlands, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Austria and Belgium joined those who had already expressed their support for the International Bureau’s proposal. Satisfaction and congratulations were expressed for the rapid and creative approach taken by the International Bureau in addressing the unusual situation posed by the ceasing of the existence of the Soviet Union.

59. The Assembly adopted PCT Rules 32.1 and 32.2 as set out in Annex II to this report and decided that the said Rules would enter into force on October 1, 1992.

60. The Delegations of France and Japan stated that, had a vote been taken on the question, they would have voted against the adoption of the said Rules.
