Unilateral use of work products related to foreign applications and grants

Even in the absence of formal or informal agreements between patent offices, many patent examiners use, where appropriate, search and examination reports as well as other useful information issued by other offices in order to facilitate the examination of corresponding national applications.

Some patent offices publish, on the Internet, certain information relating to search and examination of patent applications (for example, legal status, search and examination reports), which may be accessed by examiners of other offices.
